

KILBREEDY-MINOR:

A parish, in the barony of Coshma, 2 miles (N.W. by N.) from Kilmallock, and on the road from that place to Charleville; containing 600 inhabitants. It comprises 2087 statute acres, as apportioned under the tithe act: the soil is very good, but only about one-fifth of it is under tillage, the remainder being meadow or pasture land. The living is a rectory and vicarage, in the diocese of Limerick, and in the gift of the bishop: the tithes amount to £130. In the R.C. divisions the parish forms part of the union or district of Effin. Near the south bank of the Subtach are the ruins of the old church.
