

AGLISHCORMICK, or LISCORMUCK:

A parish, partly in the barony of Coonagh, but principally in that of Clanwilliam, 2 ½ miles (W.S.W) from Pallas-Greine, on the road to Bruff; containing 316 inhabitants. It comprises 1020 ¼ statute acres, as applotted under the tithe act: the land is in general of good quality. The living is a rectory and vicarage, in the diocese of Emly, and forms parts of the corps of the precentorship in the cathedral church of St. Alibeus, Emly, in the patronage of the Archbishop of Cashel. The tithes amount to £138.9.2 ¾ : there is neither church, glebe-house, nor glebe. In the R.C. divisions the parish is included in the union or district of Kiltteely, or Listeely. A school-house is now being erected; and there is a pay school of about 30 boys and 12 girls. There are some remains of the old parish church.